

Can get fires later in the Dry Season coz it's guaranteed to be, err, dry.

Plenty of neighbours around here in the Dry Season all carrying their essentials.

The Kakadu Highway from Pine Creek doesn't have much traffic.

Start of the dirt road up to Koolpin Gorge and Gunlom.

Just past Kambolgie campground on the road to Koolpin Gorge.

Crossing the East Alligator River. Now, where are those crocs?

The gate that keeps the 4WDs out of Koolpin Gorge. So that's why you don't need a key that has to be returned.

4WD track into Koolpin Gorge. OK riding.

Koolpin Gorge campsite. On my lonesome before the next groups arrive.

Looking down into the start of Koolpin Gorge. I'm walking, not on the bike

The 3rd Gorge at Koolpin. Real good stuff and the water is warm.

Getting out of Koolpin Gorge.

From the top of the falls at Gunlom. Hint: swim up here in the radioactive pools.

Best freshwater swimming ever, at Maguk, above the falls.

The start of Jim Jim Falls Road, derr. A good gravel road but all a bit uphill.

Almost at Gunamarr campsite on the Jim Jim Falls Road..

River crossing on the way to Twin Falls. It's only calf deep, no worries, where's those crocs?

Heading up to the top of Twin Falls.

Twin Falls Gorge. Have to take a 5 minute boat trip through the impressive gorge to get to the falls.

Aboriginal rock art at Anbangbang gallery at Nourlangie Rock. Easy to get to.

That's Nourlangie Rock from Anbangbang Billabong. Heaps of birdlife down here.

Big crocs surfing the tidal surge at Cahill's Crossing near Ubirr.

Join the throng and climb Ubirr at sunset.

The Arnhem Highway is much busier and not as interesting as the Kakadu Highway.

During the Dry Season everyone looks for the free campsites.
